

AP INFORMATION

The fee for each exam is $86. Learn more about AP Exam fees, including information about fee reductions.

Spring before starting an AP course	Well ahead of time, you need to start thinking about what AP courses you might want to take. Learn more about the AP Program on this Web site. Discuss your AP plans with your parents, teachers, and AP Coordinator.
Summer	Some AP teachers require that you complete work (like summer reading) during the summer months to prepare for their course. For example, for AP English you may be given a reading list. Make sure you complete these assignments, so that you're up to speed when the class begins.
January	Talk to your AP teachers and/or AP Coordinator about taking the exams. Contact the Services for Students with Disabilities (SSD) Coordinator at your school if you will need testing accommodations.
February 19, 2010	Deadline for submitting complete disability documentation for students with disabilities whose SSD Eligibility Forms require Documentation Review.
March 1, 2010	Deadline for homeschooled students and students whose schools do not offer AP to contact AP Services for a list of local AP Coordinators at whose schools they could arrange to test.
March 5, 2010	Deadline for submitting complete student Eligibility Forms for students with disabilities using the School Verification Process.
March 15, 2010	Deadline for homeschooled students and students whose schools do not offer AP to contact AP Coordinators identified by AP Services.
May 3-7 and May 10-14, 2010	Exam dates
May 19-21, 2010	Late-testing dates
June 15, 2010	Deadline for receipt of requests for score withholding, score cancellation, or a change in college score report recipient.
Early-Mid July	AP Score Reports released to designated colleges, students, and their high schools.
July 1, 2010	Scores by Phone available for current year's administration.
September	Scholar Award and International Diploma notifications sent to schools and students.
